A stack of newspapers is shown, with the top one featuring a large headline in Turkish: "Kırmızı elini amput etti" (He amputated his red hand). The newspaper is tilted diagonally across the frame.

A group of women are seated on the floor in a room, participating in a community meeting or training session. They are dressed in traditional Indian attire, including saris and shawls. The room has a plain wall and a tiled floor. Some women are looking towards the camera, while others are looking towards the front of the room. There are some papers and a small table in the foreground.
