INTERNATIONAL YOGA DAY

CO ORDINATOR: PRAKASAM BABU

Date & Time: 21-06-2023

Name of the Program: INTERNATIONAL YOGA DAY

Lecturers Involved: Sri G. Prakasam Babu , Smt. N.U.K.Devi

Brief Report:

Department of Mathematics Conducts International Yoga Day. The Yoga day is celebrated annually on June 21st. International Yoga Day was established by the United Nations General Assembly in 2014 to raise awareness about the benefits of practicing yoga and to promote global harmony and well-being. It is celebrated worldwide with various events, including yoga sessions, workshops, demonstrations, and discussions on yoga's positive impact on physical, mental, and spiritual health. It's important to note that the benefits of yoga are cumulative and become more pronounced with regular practice. Encouraging students to incorporate yoga into their routine can have a transformative impact on their physical and mental well-being, creating a foundation for a balanced and healthy lifestyle. In this event students and faculty members were performed yogasanas and meditation.

Abstract

Staphylococcus aureus is typically treated with antibiotics, however, due to its widespread and unselective usage, resistant strains of S. aureus have increased to a great extent. Treatment failure and recurring staphylococcal infections are also brought on by biofilm development, which boosts an organism's ability to withstand antibiotics and is thought to be a virulence factor in patients. The present study investigates the antibiofilm activity of naturally available polyphenol Quercetin against drug-resistant S. aureus. Tube dilution and tube addition methods were performed to evaluate the antibiofilm activity of quercetin against S. aureus. Quercetin treatment resulted in remarkably reduction of biofilm in S. aureus cells. Further we performed a study to investigate binding efficacies of quercetin with genes icaB and icaC from ica locus involved in biofilm formation. 3D structure of icaB, icaC and quercetin were retrieved from Protein data bank and PubChem chemical compound database respectively. All computational simulation were carried
